

HAGUE WARNS MPs OF FRAUD RISK

Some MPs may have committed fraud in their expenses claims, shadow foreign secretary William Hague has said.

Asked on BBC One's Question Time whether criminal prosecutions should be brought against some MPs, Mr Hague said: "In all probability, yes".

On the same programme, deputy Lib Dem leader Vince Cable said he believed investigations would show "outright criminality" committed by some MPs.

Police and prosecutors have said they will look at allegations against MPs.

Officials from the Metropolitan Police and the Crown Prosecution Service have established a panel to consider allegations made in the Daily Telegraph about MPs' expenses claims.
