Overview

Daniel is a specialist criminal practitioner instructed by both the defence and prosecution. His practice encompasses all forms of serious and organised crime involving murder, firearms, drugs, sexual offences and fraud.

Noted for his tenacity in court, Daniel is regularly instructed as leading junior in complex cases that require detailed analysis and examination of leading expert witnesses. Daniel is a Category 4 Prosecutor.

Daniel advises at an early stage in robust terms as to the strength or merits of a case, and whether an application to dismiss should be made. Once a decision has been made to proceed to trial, he advises as to the necessary preparation, in particular involving the instructing of expert witnesses.

He has a particular interest in motoring related offences and has wide experience defending those charged with dangerous driving and driving whilst unfit through drink and drugs.

He meticulously prepares the case so that it can be presented in its most digestible form by a jury.
