Employment CV

Overview

Louis is an experienced practitioner in all areas of employment law. His work encompasses high profile claims which are often complex and high profile in stature. He acts for a broad range of clients including businesses, local authorities, universities, other public authorities, trade unions and individuals.

He frequently acts for governmental departments in a wide variety of employment disputes.

Recent cases in which Louis has appeared and advised have concerned the following matters:

- Whether certain terms in a collective agreement were incorporated into a contract of employment
- The application of the annual leave provisions of the Working Time Regulations to certain workers
- A claim by a teacher for unfair dismissal in respect of an alleged whistleblowing incident
- Human Rights Act 1998 claim for sex discrimination
- Advising corporate clients about changes to terms/conditions and TUPE

Louis also has very significant experience and expertise in cases concerning breaches of restrictive covenants/restraint of trade clauses in contracts of employment.
